For five generations, the Brun family has been cultivating the area around Saint Rémy de Provence. In recent years, Anne and Gilles Brun relaunched the olive activity, planting 10,000 olive trees with the five main olive varieties of the Alpilles and building an arboretum with 80 different varieties. In 2000 they installed a state-of-the-art mill. The same year, they were awarded their first gold medal in the National Agriculture Competition for their olive oil. The Moulin du Calanquet's oils are served at Le Palais de l'Elysée as well as 28 Michelin-starred restaurants.

Aglandau: This olive gets its name from the acorn it resembles (acorn = gland in French). The oil is characterized by a medium to intense pungency, with aromas of raw artichokes.

Also known as the "plant de salon" the salonenque is especially concentrated in the Bouches-du-Rhône, where it accounts for 66% of the olives grown. The oil is marked by its rich mouth feel and its scent of fresh almonds.

This special assemblage, or cuvée, of the Moulin du Calanquet combines the five olive local olive varieties: the grossane, verdale, aglandau, salonenque, and picholine. Its taste develops in the mouth, starting with the buttery flavor of almonds, followed by grassy aromas or raw artichoke, and finishing with a light "ardence".
